> SHRAPNEL Sidelights on the War OLIVER OWEN KUEN.

Army terms oftentimes are the subject of jest in the trench papers published by the soldiers. Here is one pur-porting to be a definition:

CAMOUFLAGE-From camel and flag, referring to a device adopted by this animal of tying a flag to his tail, thus disguising himself as a ship of the desert. Hence-to deceive.

Fate has played largely in the life of General Smuts, the Boer leader, now a member of Britain's war advisory committee. He said to a group of friends: "When I was at Cambridge College had some one remarked that some years later I would be leading a Boer army against the British I would have declared him mad. And if when I was fighting the British he had prophesied that I would be a British general and a member of the British war cabinet I should have denounced him as madder than ever."

Once the kaiser's chief hobby was the navy. He grew a beard to make himself look more the part of a sailor. Then he took a trip to Paris, incognito. King Peter of Serbia is the only monarch of Europe who was seated on the throne by the voice and votes of his neonle.

Sir Arthur Currie, who commands the Canadian forces on the western front, once was a school teacher. Three years ago he conducted a real estate office in Victoria, B. C.

British soldiers fight the Germans for a shilling a day. Australia pays six shillings, New Zealand five, South Af-rica three and Canada four.

In addition to plans to bar aliens from New York city's skyscrapers and other buildings where a view of the water front may be obtained, a plan is under consideration which calls for the finger printing of every male German subject above the age of fourteen years in the city.

COL. HOUSE TO ACT

To Have Gen. Bliss as Military Adviser in Deliberations of Supreme Council.

ECONOMIC BODY IN VIEW

By the Associated Press.
PARIS, November 24.—Col. E. M. House, head of the American mission to the interallied conference, in speaking today of the conversation that he had yesterday with Premier Clemenceau, said it was most satisfactory and comprehensive. Col. House added that he hoped to continue his conversation with the French premier at various

On being reminded that no announcement had been made here concerning American participation on the supreme war council, Col. House said that President Wilson had directed him to represent the United States government with Gen. Bliss as military adviser, and that Admiral Benson and other members of the American mission would take part in separate consultations with the corresponding representatives of

To Include Four Nations.

To Include Four Nations.

This conference, which will last only a day or two, will be followed by the supreme war council in which only France, Great Britain, Italy and the United States will be represented. This council will be a permanent one, under the present arrangement, Col. House said today, and it will deal only with questions relating to military operations on the western front, which now include the Italian front.

War aims, Col. House said definitely, would not be discussed at either the council. He added that the American mission was here solely for the purpose of furthering the prosecution of the war and the co-ordination of resources.

A second permanent body, Col. House declared, would be the interallied conference dealing with finance, shipping, munitions and other economic and industrial aspects of the war. Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Crosby is to be America's representative at this conference, the headquarters of which may be in London.

To put this picture on canvas, the President's representative will use many different kinds of paint—that is, he will see many different kinds of Frenchmen and not confine himself to government of-ficials alone. Experience of Visitor Here.

At the conclusion of his visit, the chief of one of the foreign missions to the United States asked Col. House, I was told, whether in the latter's opinion he had really learned what America was like.

"No," the colonel replied, "you haven't."

Foreign Minister Pichon, at yesterday's banquet of the Anglo-American Press Association, said: "The war will perhaps last a long time yet, but we shall win it, and we shall owe the viotory in large part to Great Britain and America."

Arouses French Enthusiasm.

Oscar T. Crosby, assistant secretary of the United States Treasury, speaking alternately in French and English, aroused the enthusiasm of the Frenchmen present by saying:

"Everything we have that you need shall be placed at your disposal. You must not forget, however, that 3,000 miles of ocean separates us. That is the only thing which prevents us from assuming our share of the burden as rapidly as we would like."

Col. House went on to explain that no body could gain any real understanding of America from talking with the men who are running things at Washington or Col. House, devote his first few days here, conferring with the members of the interallied conference the colonel expects to meet and of the English language, which enabled the statesmen to talk together without a third person being present.

Will Observe French People.

Once necessary official consultations are concluded, the colonel expects to meet and converse with a number of individuals not converted with the government.

From these talks he means to gain a comprehensive idea of the true state of mind of the French people, the fashion in which they are bearing the increasing burden of war and the diverse currents of opinion running through the country. of the mission; William Graves Sharp, the American ambassador, and the embassy start, by President Poincare at the Elysee Palace. Cablegram to The Sunday Star and New York World. Copyright, 1917.

PARIS, November 24.—It is the intention of Col. House to obtain during his stay here "as complete a picture of war and the diverse currents of opinion running through the country. He wants to know what the man in the street thinks of the situation and how he feels about the United States. The light in which the French nation views American efforts in the war is a matter of keen interest to him.

Meanwhile his associates have most of them actually started a series of conferences on technical problems they will hold with the authorities here. Gen. Elliss has been in almost continuous consultation with Gen. Pershing and will meet Gen. Petain tomorrow. He also is expected to call on Gen. Joffre.
